INTRODUCTION

This is the story of the Perego-Gandolla family which captures their history as far back as we could trace it while incorporating historical photos and texts acquired during our research. This project began in 2008 during our first major family reunion in Córdoba, Argentina. While visiting, we started talking about locating more information about the Perego-Gandolla side of the family, as Caroso had been so successful in searching and finding so much about the Stiefel side of the family. One of the great discoveries was a wonderful suitcase, full of old photos, that our cousin Tatana had inherited from Tía Ofelia, her mother, who inherited it from Abuela María. Caroso and I scanned many of the photos, mainly those from Italy and particularly those from Chiavenna, in the hopes of being able to identify them someday. Another surprise was to find a letter from Olympia Aureggi from Milano to Tatana written in 1988 where she was talking about a “Marta Perego” from San Diego who was looking for me.

When we returned to San Diego, I went back to the letter again; it was hard to read because it was in Italian. We thought that Marta Perego would no longer be in San Diego, after so many years, but just in case, we looked in the phone book and there was an M. Perego. We called that phone number, and it was Marta! She is the daughter of Giovanni Perego, and she is a researcher in molecular biology at the Scripps Institute in San Diego. By then, we had already decided to travel to Italy with my daughter, Suchi and my granddaughters, Nastassia and Maya, daughters of Emiliano and Carlos, respectively. Coincidentally, Marta Perego was going to travel to Chiavenna at the same time, so we were able to get together at the house of her father, Giovanni Perego. She served as a translator and guide to the city, and we were able to have long conversations with her dad. He took us to the cemetery where part of the Perego and Chiodera families are buried. We also toured the town of Chiavenna and surrounding areas. He showed us some photos, documents, the house, and the furniture that have been in the family for generations. After Chiavenna, we went to Milano, where another part of the family lives: Olympia Aureggi (daughter of Margherita Perego and Alessandro Aureggi) with her husband Francesco Ariatta, her daughter Margherita, and her grandchildren, Olympia and Francesco. We talked a lot about the family because Olympia remembered all the relatives in great detail. She was in contact with Abuela María for many years and Abuela María had visited her in Chiavenna. Margherita showed us the castle of the Count Sforza in Milano, to whom we are related. Olympia promised to help us with data research and family stories.

When we returned to San Diego, I made two packages with the updated family tree with copies of the unidentified photos and sent them to Don Giovanni and Olympia. We communicated with them often trying to clarify information, get new data, and identify the unidentified photos. Meanwhile, I continued to visit the Mormons' Genealogical Research Center to research information about births and deaths in Bellagio and Chiavenna and locate the foreign passengers' arrival ledgers to Argentina. At the center, I also searched the Internet and use borrowed films from the main research archive located in Salt Lake City, Utah. Unfortunately, for those two regions, the information in those databases doesn't go back far enough, only until the mid-1800s. In this document, you will find some information about Chiavenna and Bellagio, the birthplaces of our family on Abuela María's side. I included many identified photos from Italy and of our family members in Argentina. The last part of this book includes a descendant chart, letters, copies of some birth and death certificates, copies of Mormon database records, and family stories that I hope we can expand in the future. This was a collaborative effort from many people and it's a never-ending project. There's always one more fact, one more photo, another unidentified relative, another surprise. I hope this effort will not end here and that this book, along with our other publications about the Stiefel family, continue to grow with ongoing family contributions.

THE PANDORA SUITCASE

This is the suitcase that started everything! One day, my brother Oscar (Caroso) was visiting my cousin Tatana, and as it generally happens when our family gets together, they started talking about the family: old stories, new stories, some gossip, good memories, forgettable incidents and so on. Caroso mentioned that we had very few pictures of the family from the old countries, that is, Italy and Germany. Well, to his surprise, my cousin Tatana appeared with a very old, battered suitcase which had belonged to Abuela María and was passed down from mother to daughter until it landed at Tatana's house. When Caroso opened the suitcase, he could not believe what was inside: old pictures, letters, postcards, souvenirs, and what not. He spent hours that day looking at the pictures and on the next visit to her house, he brought a scanner and a computer and started scanning the pictures there, since she would not let go of the suitcase.

All this gave him the push to start working on the family tree and he has been doing that for several years; first researching the German side of the family and then working on the Italian side. He then began organizing family reunions. One of those years, he took me to Tatana's house, and we continued scanning and identifying photos in preparation for the next year's reunion. Many of the photos we couldn't identify, so it became my job to make copies and send them to Italy hoping the family could identify them.

In the photo above, you can see the suitcase, and in the photo below, you can see my brother Oscar (Caroso), me (Marta), the computer, and the scanner. My cousin Tatana is just outside the picture (wearing black boots).

During the summer of 2009, I traveled to Italy with my daughter, Suchi and two of my granddaughters, Maya and Nastassia. We met with part of the family, the Ariattas, in Chiavenna and Milano, took many pictures of the tombstones, the village, and the family. It was a great trip!

PORTÓN DE SANTA MARÍA

A BRIEF HISTORY OF CHIAVENNA

The city of Chiavenna is located at the foothills of the Raetian Alps, where the valley of the river Liro (Valley of Splurga) and the valley of the Mera River (Valley of Bregaglia) come together. The center of the town is located in a narrow and deep ravine formed by the Rio Mera. The buildings around Chiavenna are at the bottom, on the fluvial cones or on the terraces that interrupt the steep slopes. These slopes are covered with materials displaced by the landslides that occurred after the glaciers melted about 10,000 to 12,000 years ago. The Chiavenesque poet Giovanni Bertacchi wrote that the name Chiavenna "with a slow and closed sound, seems to reflect the shadow of the valleys where it hides, behind the walls, hills and cliffs that embrace with savage intimacy the soul of its inhabitants and that nourishes its faith and its indelible memories". The Romans called it "Clavenla". This name appears on a military map of the third century and on the route of Antonino, in the following century. The "Diácono" Paolo Warnefrido, in the "History of the Longobardos", which he wrote at the end of this century, recalls that Ausprando, the King of the Longobardos, pursued by Ariperto II, escapes to "Clavenna", by Chur before arriving in Bavaria. The origin of the name "Clavenna" comes from long ago. By 1200s it was already linked to "clavem" (key) and in 1260 the commune commissioned ten white linen flags with a key made of silk applied to the middle of the flags. In 1616, Giovanni Guler, of Grigione, introducing the county of Chiavenna in his post "Raetia", notes: "... whose name comes from the word "key". In fact, the castle of Chiavenna, which gave its name to the village and the surrounding territory, "in the past [...] was a kind of key that closed the way to foreign people." This etymology is interesting, but not very convincing. Now, it seems that the etymology comes from the Mediterranean root "clava", which would have to do with "alluvial cone," that is, alluvial deposits at the end of a valley. This theory may be true, because Chiavenna was born from the deposits of the river Mera, according to geological evidence. The name of this Alpine village is the same as that of the river that flows into the Po, near Piacenza and which has given the name to two towns: Chiavenna Rocchetta and Chiavenna Landi. The Roman "Clavenna" was a station of importance on the routes that led to the passes to reach the borders of the empire in Rezia and Norico; especially when Milan became one of the capitals of the empire. For this period, documentation is scarce. There are several archaeological finds that came to light during excavations to lay the foundations of buildings, drainage, telephone cables, and power lines. These discoveries were made between the beds of the Mera and the Pratogiano rivers. Very little is known from the period following the fall of the Roman Empire. Christianity is spread; under the Longobardos, Chiavenna becomes one of the most important trading and customs centers of the empire. In the 10th century, the King Itálico granted the bishop of Como the tax collection of Chiavenna. Under the influence of the Duchy of Svevia, the people in power were interested in supporting Emperor Frederick in the fight against the communes of Lombardy. He gave them to his friend, Guiberto Grasso, for the creation of the abbot of Sta. María di Dona (Pratal). At the end of the winter of 1176, Barbarossa met in Chiavenna with his cousin Enrico, El León, Duke of Baviara and Sassonia, to obtain support for his military campaigns in Italy. During the 1200s, the struggles between the feudal families of Como continued, and this had negative repercussions on the valley. In 1335, the Visconti family of Milan became monarchs of the Valchiavenna Valley, which they placed under the Balbiani family of Varenna. The Sforza family followed the Viscontis. In 1486, they tried to take possession of the southern valleys; burned down the village, looted it and returned to their territory after losing many ducats. Milan realized that the northern borders were at risk and took steps to strengthen the most important centers. Chiavenna was fenced off with walls, erected between 1488 and 1497, along 2 kilometers, with fourteen large towers and three gates (to Milan-Como, Val S. Giacomo and the Bregaglia Valley). The project was planned by Ambrogio Ferrari; also present were the architect Giovanni Antonio Amedeo and Leonardo da Vinci, who remembers the Chiavenna Valley in its "Atlantic Code". Ludovico el Moro was followed by the French; but because they did not leave very good memories, the villagers had great relief when the Grigioni, in 1512, took possession of Valchiavenna, Valtellina and the region around Bormio. The name of the Republic of the Three Alliances (which now corresponds to the Swiss canton of Grigioni) lasted until 1797, with a pause between 1620 and 1639.

The 1500s were for Chiavenna a period of prosperity, at least for the wealthy families, who invested their capitals in the construction of palaces, along the main and secondary roads, with warehouses on the first floor and elegant quarters upstairs.

The Grigioni supported the Protestant Reformation and imposed religious tolerance for Catholics and the reformed. Religious and lay people who left Italy to escape the Inquisition, took refuge in Chiavenna. Among them was Francisco Negri de Bassano, who opened a humanist school, Augustin Mainardi who founded the reformist church S. Maria del Patarino, Ludovico Castelvetro, of Modena, who died in Chiavenna, and many others. Along with the immigrants there were also Chiavenna natives who became Protestants. The Reformation built three churches to conduct its services. The relationship with Catholics was not always easy, especially since Protestants had the support of the dominant authority. In Valtellina, in 1620, protests broke out that resulted in the massacre of hundreds of Protestants. The political reasons were masked by religious reasons, although it is not always possible to distinguish between the two causes. There were no massacres in Valchiavenna. In the following years, until the Milan treaty of 1639, there were several military occupations as the Adda and Mera valleys, backed by the great powers (France, Venice, and Spain) were a strategic region of great importance. The Lanzquenets, on their way to Mantova, were arrested in Milan and they carried the plague, which killed about a third of the population, devastating the area and reducing the inhabitants to starvation.

With the Treaty of Milan of 1639, Chiavenna was again granted to the Grigioni. One of the clauses of the treaty established that the only religion admitted in those territories was Catholic and prohibited residency for Protestants. During this period, many of the sacred buildings, legally granted to Protestants, were restructured. In Chiavenna, the convents of the Franciscans and the Agostines were founded; the first where the Patarino church had been and the second, next to the church of St. Pietro. In the 1700s, frictions between the governors and the emperor's subjects were aggravated, as the former imposed a commercial monopoly, and this marked the end of the domination of the Grigione. The peoples of Valtellina and Valchiavenna, in 1797, called for and obtained their annexation to the republic of Cisalpina. The Grigioni, due to internal conflicts, had accepted the ex-colony as the Fourth Alliance, provoking Napoleon's suspicions, who had decided on the annexation to the Cisalpine. In 1814, the Griogino's efforts to recover Chiavenna were thwarted. The Congress of Vienna established that Valtellina and Valchiavenna be annexed to the reign of Lombardy-Veneto. The fate of the Mera Valley was now definitely linked to Lombardy. Under the Austrians' administration many major administrative reforms were carried out, economic activity was increased due to the new infrastructures, especially related to the brewing and textile industry. In 1859, Chiavenna came under the reign of Sardinia, which in 1861 was the reign of Italy. Then began a period of economic crippling due to customs policies; the collapse of the local economy occurred with the development of the passes of Fréjus, S. Gottardo and Sempione, strategic points for transportation between Pedania and the valleys of the Alps.

CHIAVENNA

A BRIEF HISTORY OF BELLAGIO

Lake Como, with its blue waters surrounded by gardens and forests and backed by the snow-capped Alps, generates strong feelings. Romance, inspiration, even soft melancholy~ these are the emotions that for centuries the lake had motivated poets (Lord Byron), novelist (Stendhal), Composers (Verdi and Rossini) and many more visitors, queens, such as the deposed Caroline de Brunswick, whom George IV of England exiled there for her depraved ways; or to modern travelers who slide over the blue waters on steam boats or, these days, the rich and famous such as George Clooney, who owns a villa there.

Besides its suggestive power, Lake Como is a nice place to rest. Less than an hour from Milano by train or car, its sparkling waters and its deep and green coasts provide a wonderful respite from modern and urban life. It is understood why Lake Como served as a backdrop for romantic scenes in "Star Wars II: Clones Attack"~ one of the very few movie scenes that were not created digitally. We suppose that even George Lucas realized that Como was a place of such a beauty that he did not need to tweak the images.

Bellagio is known as one of the most beautiful cities in Italy. Nestled amid cypress groves and green gardens, its ancient terracotta buildings climb from the lake promenade along cobblestoned and stepped streets. Although Bellagio is a very popular place for visitors from the Milanese region who spend a day of rest, and the British and Americans who come to relax for a week or two, the city has generally not been overwhelmed by tourism. One of Bellagio's famous gardens surrounds the Villa de Melzi, built by Francesco Melzi, a friend of Napoleon and an official of his Republic. The villa was the retreat of Franz Liszt and is now home to a distinguished family from Lombardy; the public is allowed to visit its large and beautiful gardens and fountains including a pavilion where a collection of Egyptian sculptures is on display. Another famous garden in Bellagio is that of the Villa Serbelloni, occupying land owned by Pliny the Younger, which is now in the hands of the Rockefeller Foundation.

Bellagio, called "The Pearl of Lake Como, was already famous in Roman times. Its beautiful geographical position and strategically important location have created its history. It is believed, from archaeological evidence, that there was human presence in the vicinity of Bellagio in the Paleolithic period (about 30,000 years ago), but only until the 7th century appeared a "castellum" on a promontory, a place of worship and trade, which served the many small villages of the lake. But it was in Roman times that Lake Como, called Larius by the Romans, began its important role. The Romans introduced the olive and laurel trees and that we still find in abundance today on the shores of the lake. Pliny the Younger (1st century) describes in a letter the long periods he spent in his village of Bellagio, during which he devoted himself not only to study and writing but also to hunting and fishing. With the occupation of the Longobardos, Bellagio was more fortified. In 744, King Luitprando settled there.

It is believed that Bellagio was a free municipality and a seat of a court by the year 1100 and that his dependence on Como was merely formal. However, Bellagio's strategic position was very important for the city of Como, which had no tolerance for these autonomic tendencies. Bellagio, therefore, had to suffer more than one foray from Como and fought fierce naval battles against this neighbor. In 1154, under Frederick Barbarossa, Bellagio was forced to swear allegiance and pay homage to Como. Towards the end of the thirteenth century, Bellagio, who had participated in numerous wars on the side of the Gibelinos, (pro-empire party), became the property of the Visconti and was integrated into the Duchy of Milan. To transport all guests to the festivities for the marriage of Bianca Maria Sforza and Emperor Maximilian I, on December 6, 1493, 32 highly decorated ships were needed. In 1535, when Francesco II Sforza, the last Duke of Milan, died, they began, in Lombardy and on the lands of Lake Larius, two centuries of onerous Spanish rule, during which time the book "Sposi de promess" (La Prometida) was written.

An important and evocative testimony of Spanish domination is the staircase called "Derta" built in this period that leads from the Guggiate district to the Suira district. In 1533, Francesco Sfondrati bought the feud of Bellagio and for more than 200 years the Sfondrati family was the most important reference point for Bellagio and its history. All the progress and events of the city were associated with this family. In the Bellagio of these times, favored by the ideal position for transport and trade, several small industries were established among which candle production was particularly remarkable and silk production along with its corollaries, silkworm breeding and blackberry cultivation. With the death of Carlo Sfondrati in 1788, Bellagio's fiefdom passed into the hands of the illustrious Serbelloni family. At the end of the eighteenth century, Alessandro Serbelloni spent 929,622 euros (equivalent to today's euros) on improvements to his private park, when a worker's daily salary was less than one hundredth of a euro per day.

During the brief Napoleonic period, the port of Bellagio assumed a strategic and military importance and an event, apparently of secondary importance, channeled the fate of Bellagio towards the following two centuries: the decision of Count Francesco Melzi, Duke of Lodi and Vice President of the Republic of Cisalpina to establish his summer house there. Count Melzi proceeded to build on the west bank, near Loppia, a magnificent villa. This attracted to the area the top of the Milanese nobility and the promontory was transformed into an elegant and refined court. Roads were built for the carriages, first to link the villas and palaces, then to the city center and finally the provincial road Erba-Bellagio was completed. The fame of the small town on the splendid lake would be known far from the confines of Lombardo-Veneto: even Emperor Francis I of Austria visited it in 1816 and returned in 1825 to stay in the Villas Serbelloni, Trotti and Melzi.

In 1838, Bellagio received with all the honors Emperor Fernando I, archduke Ranieri and Minister Mettemich, who arrived there from Varenna on the ship "Lario", the first steamship on the lake, having been launched in 1826. Bellagio was one of the most frequented towns by the nobility of Lombardy and the constructions of beautiful villas, gardens, and luxury shops began. Tourists crowded the roads and space was limited, so it was decided to tear down the old port that reached the portal in order to build a wider square. Tourism had already become the main economic resource of the town of Bellagio and from this period onwards Bellagio's history coincides with that of its hotels.

The first was hotel Bellagio, founded in 1825 with the renovation of the former hospitality house of Abbondio Genazzini, and which was later converted into the first large hotel on the lake, the Genazzini Hotel. Following the example of these forerunners, several splendid hotels were built in the space of a few years, many of which continue to function and frequently remain in the hands of the same families who founded them. Some of these are: Hotel Firenze, built on the former house of Captain del Lario in 1870, Grand Hotel Bellagio, now the Grand Hotel Villa Serbelloni, opened in 1872.

In 1888, the three largest hotels, Genazzini, Grande Bretagne and Grand Hotel Bellagio, for the first time, introduced electric light to replace gas lighting, and after that many patrician houses followed. During the 19th century, when many nobles stayed in Bellagio hotels, they often rented entire flats and used some rooms only to display their clothes on the beds. Senator Gary Hart of the USA loved his stay in Bellagio so much that he used the place as the basis for a spy novel in which a secret agent hides in a Bellagio hotel. In Las Vegas, Steve Wynn, the President of Mirage Resorts, has built a hotel-casino named Bellagio, declaring it to be the most romantic hotel in the world. The hotel has 37 floors, 3,421 rooms and a staff of 8,000. The entire complex occupies a space of 83 hectares and includes an artificial lake with fountains, dozens of gardens and a "village" with small boutiques and shops that resemble those of the city of Lake Como. Bellagio also saw the birth of 6 world rowing champions: Alberto Belgeri, Enrico Gandolla, Igor Pescialli, Franco Sancassani, Daniele Gilardoni, and Elisabetta Sancassani; first European water-skiing speed champion: David Conti; first European football champion: Giacomo Cranchi ("Pacio"); first European beach volleyball champion: Laura Bruschini. "Bellagio was one of the first Italian tourist center that became truly international and never degenerated into a 'tourist machine'.

SFORZESCO CASTLE IN MILANO

Sforzesco Castle is one of the most prominent symbols of Milano. Its construction began in the second half of the fourteenth century and it lasted until the beginning of the twentieth century, through different stages and difficulties.

Throughout its history, the Castle was intended for different uses: it started a garrison and then became the splendid residence of the Dukes of Milan, of the Visconti House at the beginning, and of the Sforza House at the end.

The castle flourished greatly throughout the Renaissance. The locals of Milano set out to rival the nobility that ruled in the rest of Italy and Europe who had been building their great palatial residences. As a result, the most outstanding artists of the time, such as Bramante and Leonardo, to name a few, arrived in Milan. During the rule of Ludovico Sforza, the Moor, Leonardo lived in the Castle; the sign of his genius is still admired in the celebrated Sala delle Asse.

After the final fall of the Lordship of Sforza, foreign dominations began: French and Spanish, earlier, and Austrian, later, until reaching the Cisalpine Republic. During this period, which was finished with the Unity of Italy, the Castle lost its aspect of princely palace and returned to its early function, that is, to house the garrison that was prominent during the Milanese Period.

In the late nineteenth century, the Castle became the property of the Milan City Council, and they began a wide campaign of rehabilitation and reconstruction to restore its old splendor and make it the seat of an important museum. This effort has continued until now and currently, several museums and collections are in the Castle. In its halls, there are works considered national and world artistic heritage, such as the famous Piedad Rondanini, Michelangelo's last masterpiece.

LOS CUENTOS DE TATANA/TATANA'S TALES

Río del Medio

El papi (Enrique González Albarracín) bought that property in 1934, without seeing the place, because of sweet memories from his childhood and sentimental reasons, since his mother was the very first teacher in the town of Los Reates. He bought those acres without knowing where they were. The property was called Chincay Wayco, which in Quechua, means Quebrada Escondida, because it is located in a small valley, between two municipalities, Santa María and Calamuchita, and it is divided by the Río del Medio, so we fulfilled our dream of having our own river, since nobody went there, only our family and friends.

When my father bought that land, it only had a tiny adobe house with a wooden porch and a thatched roof, with dirt floors, like all the mountain houses then. He devoted himself to improve it, making new floors that were coated, and fixing them as needed throughout the years. That land was not good to raise any crops since it was all rocky, and it was only possible to grow corn in only two places; there was another place dedicated to a beautiful vegetable garden; those who saw the vegetable garden were amazed. In front, before reaching the house, we had to cross the river; he made a ford so we could cross it and get to the house. As he liked everything related to the countryside, he bought the magazine Revista La Chacra, and from there he learned and taught both his children, as well as the locals, to live better and improve their standard of living, not discriminating between their children, and us; we all had to work, according to our age, the older boys had to fix the barbed wire, the pircas (stone walls), and chopped the firewood.

The good water was put in an earthen jar to keep it cool for drinking. We went to the river, at 6 p.m. and collected the water in buckets. It was easy going but returning was hard because the buckets were very heavy, carrying the water and climbing to the house, which was about 3 blocks away. Behind the house ran a stream but that water was good for washing dishes and for general cleaning, nothing more.

Later, my father started buying animals; we had horses, cows, pigs, chickens, ducks, and I don't remember what else; we had every domesticated animal. Then, with the improvements, he made a small dam, upstream, to make an acequia. With the water that ran in the acequia, the vegetable garden was watered, and all kinds of vegetables and fruits were grown. There were 125 peach trees, and, in the summer, we would sit, under a willow, to peel the fruit to make jam. They were made in large quantities, for the whole family, and to give away. The Guindado liquor was the only one that mother made, for the winter; it was the only liquor that was consumed at home. There were also all kinds of jams and marmalades from peaches, apricots, grapes, quince, figs; we preserved the fruit in all forms, in jams and in syrup. In the vegetable garden, there was also a tobacco patch; the youngest, were the ones in charge of cutting the leaves, thread them with a needle and thread and put them to dry in a shed, then, after being dry, we chopped them, and we stored in jars, with slices of apples, so that the tobacco would stay humid; my father and my brothers and I learned to smoke home-made cigarettes.

I remember that with my brother Cheche, we went to the river to smoke, and then, before we came up to the house, we chewed mint or peperina leaves, so that we did not smell of cigarettes. With Cheche, who was only two years older than me, we did a lot of mischief, of all kinds; he was the one with the ideas and I was the companion in all of his shenanigans; I was his accomplice, and he manipulated me nicely.

Very close to the house we had a hill, and at its top there was a thorn bush (Espinillo). According to Cheche, at the base of the bush, there was a gold mine. So, at nap time, we both would go, hidden from mother, carrying a shovel and pickaxe. I do not remember seeing any snakes, but I imagine that there were many, but they never bother us. It was very hard to carry the shovel and pickaxe for me because they were very heavy, but hey, I did it. One day, Yiyi, my oldest sister, who was dating Manolo, was given some golden earrings; Cheche took them, broke them and when we got down from what he said was his gold mine, but which had only mica, (big difference), he showed the broken hoops, and Yiyi realized that they were hers, and almost killed us both.

Another year, Susy, our cousin, went with us to spend the summer vacation. Our house was being remodeled, and at this moment, we were, mother, Susy, Teresita, Chingo and I; we would have been, me 10 years old, Susy 12, and Teresita 5. Chingo, was not at the house at that time, since he had gone to Roca's house, because this lady was making a portrait of him. Their house was far away, so he went on horseback, and on his return trip a great storm came, which caught him in the middle of a field. We were in one room far from the house, and in the afternoon the storm came, with rain and hail, which lasted 30 minutes; the hail was small, but it destroyed all the plants on the vegetable garden. I was crying, mom was lighting blessed palms and candles. All three of us were very scared. Teresita was sleeping, and mom told me not to cry, so as not to wake her up; it was raining down on us. In the morning when we got up, we found everything as if it were wintertime, bare trees, dead birds, and we went to the cow's corral, and we found only one heifer, of the five that were there the day before. The hail was 1.50 meters high; we got scared thinking they would be under the accumulated hail, but no, they had escaped, just like the cows.

I remember that we had only one match, and we had to light the wood fire for cooking, so, we lit a candle, with that single match, in order to preserve the fire. Mom was worried, thinking about Chingo, hoping nothing had happened to him. She sent us to the river, to see if he was coming. The river was growing, and we were taking turns to tell him not to cross it, to stay in the house at the front, until the river went down, but he was worried, not for us, but for a horse that he had, and while we were up, he crossed it, because it was his habit of crossing the river when it was swollen. Poor mother with all her problems, with her 8 children and her illness. Between the dining room and the kitchen, there was a deep pantry, with two doors facing each other. There, my horse got stuck inside; we didn't know how to get him out, as the pantry was narrow and long. It took a lot of work to get the horse out of there, but he came out finally. In addition, we had another room, outside the house, which was another pantry, where there was a cooler room, where we put the vegetables and meat to preserve it, it had no glass windows, only metallic fabric, and there we kept the bags of flour, yerba mate, sugar, and other things that were brought wholesale.

The previous weekend, father had brought us three large cans of cookies, but water got inside the cans, and they all got wet, we were so sad. I think Susy isn't going to forget this summer ever.

Again, mother sent Teresita and me to Los Reartes, on horseback, to take some fruit to some relatives who spent the summer there; we carried the peaches in some saddlebags, loose, and went galloping when we could. When we got there and gave them the peaches, they looked like a smoothy, due to the bumping of the saddlebags against the belly of the horse, it was a disaster.

We spent the most beautiful summers in that place, we had freedom, we would eat fruit, we would ride horses, ride in a sulky or in a cart, we would bathe in the river, and we would read, we would listen to music with a victrola, which we had to crank with the handle. I remember this summer with Susy, the victrola did not work, the crank handle had been broken, so we turned the with our finger, and another person held the membrane, I think that is the name; and as the needle was worn, we used black acacia spines, and we only had one record, which was called "You have bought a car", and that record played all day.

Another anecdote of Río del Medio.

Since I was born, the last vertebrae of my spinal column are welded, and is congenital, so I do not have a good mobility and have problems with my column. When I wanted to ride a horse, I couldn't jump on top of the horse, as everyone else did, I had to look for a big stone, a chair or anything, to step on it. On one of the trips to The Reartes, the saddle cinch got loose, and we were just in the middle of an open field, where there was not a large stone to stand and be able to get on the horse, after adjusting the cinch, I had to look for a stone to be able to step on, but there was none. It was difficult, but I succeeded.

Those summers bring me so many beautiful memories when I went to Río del Medio. Going there was a whole odyssey at that time, with very old cars, from the 40s. We left in the early morning, mom, dad, Cheche and Teresita. We had breakfast at the Alta Gracia Crossroads, it was coffee with milk, in very large white stone cups, with the milk foam on top, then we continued traveling and in La Serranita, we made another stop, where we ate a sandwich with that farm bread, the crust was hard, and the inside was too. This was a very special bread, which in olden times was everywhere, but we can no longer find it. We arrived at the house after 5 hours of traveling, when the road was good, and we encounter no rain. Otherwise, we needed to use those famous chains on the car wheels, so as not to get stuck. At that time, there was no Dique los Molinos. At the present time, this trip can be done in an hour and a half. On one of the trips, we got stuck in the mud, and after a while, some locals appear, carrying a wooden coffin with a dead person inside; they were going to bury him in Los Reartes, but when they saw us, they left the coffin on the side of the road and helped us out of the swamp where we were.

Another time, the three youngest ones were with our mom at home, when the Justice of the Peace, who lived near our home, about a kilometer away, came to ask mom, if we could hold the prisoners in any of the rooms of the house, since he had no place to put them and held them tied to a tree. Of course, mom said no, since at the time, there were none of my male siblings in the house. So many things have happened to us there, both good and bad. When my mom was sick, with her cancer, at a time mommy was unwell, dad left us a car and the driver, in case something happened to her. That driver was called Anacleto Oliva, and he loved my mom very much. At that time, we still had the first rancho and Oliva slept in a cot, in the porch, next to the door of mom's bedroom, just in case something happened to her, so he could help her right away, and so he did every night, until the last week, when dad came back from Córdoba.

I preferred to spend my summers here, at Río del Medio, instead of Villa del Lago, at the house of Abuela María. Here we had more fun, more freedom, it was something different. Here we lacked everything, electricity, refrigerator, running water, things that were available at the grandmother's house. That house had all the comforts, but we preferred this country life, where we learned to do everything, to milk the cows and drink the milk at the cow's feet, to have breakfast with the homemade bread, with the jam and butter made by us. In the middle of the morning, we loved to yogurt or the mazamorra with milk, the big lunches, with all homemade ingredients, in the afternoon the tea and mate with pastries, and in the evening the same the great food. I will not forget the yemitas, which mom made with a fresh egg yolk, and 5 tablespoons of sugar; we beat the mixture very well, with a fork, until the sugar was dissolved and was all fluffy. Mom added Marsala or Port to hers; or the soft-boiled eggs, with a running yolk, mixed with breadcrumbs, how delicious!

There are many memories, as we washed our clothes in the river and the wool from mattresses that we washed also in the river. How much wool and how many clothes the river took when we got careless. Another tradition was to wash the cars in the river, using buckets. We loved to do that! and to think that on the trip back to Córdoba, the cars again were filled with dirt, really, I don't know why we did it, but it was fun, because while washing the car, we splattered water on each other.

When someone was coming by car to visit us, I loved to wait and see how they try to go through the ford and make the climb to the house. Sometimes, they could not, and the car got turned around on the ford and if they did not know how to drive very well, they would fall into the river. Chingo told them how they had to do it so that the car did not stop and slide down back to the river. This is how I learned how to cross the ford since there was a very steep climb through stones just after the ford.

It was also fascinating to watch the storms, the lightning, and how the sky lit up and on starry nights, watching the sky, it was wonderful, as it was all dark, there were no lights anywhere and the stars looked much brighter. We gathered the tucos (lightening bugs) in a jar; they have hard shells, at least one centimeter long, with wings, and have the light always on, not like the fireflies.

I learned so much during those summers, about the countryside, its customs, its foods, the local tales, to ride a horse, to swim and so many things. We learned to watch how the animals react to rain, how they announce it. We learned that if it rained in Cumbrecita, where the river is born, you'll have the rising in five hours, listening to the sound when it approaches, which sounds like thunder or a car or an airplane. Dad made 3 suspension bridges, so that he could cross the river, but the risings took them away. We saw the stream increase and take many trees, such as wicker trees and willows. Really, all this I carry in my blood and in my memory because I have lived among the mountains, I am used to them, bathing in rivers of transparent waters, seeing the bottom, their stones. The sea I do not like, I get dizzy with the waves, and I am afraid of that immensity, and it is the same with the plains; it is like feeling helpless. Instead, the mountains contained me, I feel sheltered, I do not know why, but it is what I feel, that is why I like so much the place where I live, as I tell my children, I feel like a tree, with its roots here and in this climate, if they take them out, they die. Only those of us who have lived here, know it and it feels like a part of oneself.

Villa del Lago

Villa del Lago, we named it Heaven and Hell, because of our grandmother, who made us work and cook, did not let us bathe in the lake, or leave the property, out of fear. Abuela María would wake us up at 6 in the morning, put the radio on very loud to wake us up, then we would go to her room. She drank her mate and we would sit on her bed around her; she would tell us stories, made up by her, but always with some teaching, then everyone had their tasks: mostly cleaning the house, but she made Susy and I cook. The meals we made! Once I had to make potato gnocchi, and I served them, they were all sticky, they were horrible, but we had to eat them anyway, since she said, that in the war, many people would have wish to eat that dish and we wanted to waste it. We made lunch at 11 am, also we had to take a nap and she went to bed at 7 pm and would close the whole house and we had to go to bed, but we, who were accustomed to going to bed at 9 or 10 pm thought it was too early. There were also the rosaries; we prayed on the rotunda at 5 pm and we saw our friends passing by on a sailboat and we were there praying. There were many incidents like these ones and when we meet with Susy and Mimi, we remembered those so-called vacations. One thing, we read a lot, especially grandmother's books, she was an avid reader, books by Pérez and Pérez, she had the complete collection, plus the magazine El ParaTí, which she collected.

I also remember a vacation in San Javier and another trip to San Clemente, with mom, Gorgo, Tía Otilia, Ernesto and I, in our father's car, which he lent us, and we went to visit Octavio who was there, and our car broke down, and Octavio had to take us and bring us back by truck, at night. Poor Tía Otilia arrived at the convent at about 3 in the morning.

Pascanas and Familia

I don't want to say anything about Pascanas. I never lived there, because when my parents returned from Europe, they stayed in Córdoba, because mom was already sick from cancer the tongue, so that's why we did not go back Pascanas. I saw my parents' house, when I went on a trip to Wenceslao Escalante for work, and I drove through Pascanas, and so I saw the house and our grandfather's business, but I never went back again, I know only everything that I heard and was told. Dad, Enrique Jacinto González-Albarracín was the first mayor of Pascanas, and they paid tribute to him. They have a picture of him in the Quartermaster's Office. I could not go to the ceremony. My father's mother was called Restituta Albarracín de González, but as González was a very common surname, to differentiate it the two names were hyphenated together. I don't think anyone knows the real name of my brothers and sisters; they are only known by their nicknames:

Lita - Ofelia Nélica

Yiyi - Elvia Ester

Pelado - Enrique Alberto

Gorgo - Jorge Raúl

Chingo - Carlos Iván

Cheche - Omar Emilio

El LINYERA (The Wanderer)

TATANA Thursday, April 29, 2010, 7:07 PM

"SUSANA GONZALEZ ALBARRACIN" <tatana1936@gmail.com>

"Marta Stiefel Ayala, Ph.D." <periquita88@yahoo.com>

Marta, our famous uncle, "the Linyera," I think his name was Eustaquio, I believed he lived in Despeñaderos, but there is another version, according to Oscar, who said he was a German. I don't know if he was our great-grandfather's brother. He was a great professor, and during vacations, he traveled all over Europe and Argentina, it was said, riding the trains without paying. He was like a linyera (wanderer), and he carried a backpack full of books, and had a lot of stories to tell. He came unannounced, stayed a few days and left abruptly without telling anyone. Everybody was very deferential to him and was offered the best seat at the table. Supposedly, he was a great scholar, and when classes were about to start, he went home, he bathed, he groomed himself very well, and he went to teach his classes, crazy, right?

I just talked to Elena, to ask her about him, she also knows the story, but not as I thought; she said he was not from Despeñaderos, but from Pascana, yes, she knows that his name was Eustaquio, but she does not know anything about the kinship.

I just talked to Susy; she also remembers our grandmother's story. It seems that he was from Pascanas, and I started to look for the relationship he had with our grandfather, he must have been a cousin, since I did not find any Eustaquios as Grandpa Carlos' brother. Who knows what relationship the grandfather had with this madman? We will find out, do not worry, but the story is true.

A kiss to the two of you.

Carissimi Susanna ed Ernesto,

abbiamo ricevuto con molto gradimento la Vostra carissima lettera e la partecipazione del casamiento di Alejandro e Inés Maria:

MUCHAS FELICIDADES! Un grande abbraccio a tutti! Participamos a Vuestra fiesta

Noi ritardiamo a rispondere perchè Francesco è stato un po' all'estero per trabajo
e inoltre perchè volevamo parlarvi delle cassetas che in albergo NON hanno più trovaanno detto che sicuramente sono state rubate da obreros che hacen limpieza.

De toda manera muchas gracias!

Abiamo sempre di Voi con Giovanni e Emma e Vi ricordiamo sempre con tanto piacere tutti Voi cari parenti. Marta Perego di Giovanni non ha potuto incontrare Marta Siefel in San Diego perchè ~~perchè~~ falta la direccion: ¿ds pueden enviarla a n-sotros? Non abbiamo visto Ignacio della Democrazia Cristiana, pensavamo di vederlo durante la visita del Presidente Alfonsin in Italia.

La torta di ^{aria} fioretto è: pasta da péne (pasta de pan) con uova (6 per 1 Kg di farina) e burro (manteca : 300 hg /350 per 1 Kg di farina) e sopra un impasto di zucchero, manteca e fiore di finocchio (hinoco), tutto cotto al forno. Fateci sapere se è chiara la receta de la torta? Se no, la invio più chiara. Ditemi se siete riusciti a realizzarla.

Con muchos gusto attendemo las fotos del casamiento per conoscere tutta la famiglia.

Con piacere Vi invieremo foto e cartoline di Chiavenna e di Bellagio.

Bellagio è il paese del Vostro bisnonno Gandola (marito di Caterina Perego).

E' un paese molto ~~molto~~ bello e Vi manderemo le cartoline. Un parente di Vs.

...arrivano in italiano con qualche parola in spagnolo per abituarvi alle lingue dei vostri antenati!

di Voi con la mia mamma; ma temo che siano morti perchè erano molto viejos. Mi informerò dei loro figli. = Sono sempre state gente muchas distinguidas. Quando la Vostra ⁷abuela Maria è venuta in Italia volevamo condurla a trovare il sig. Pietro Gandola a Lecco e poi a Bellagio a vedere il paese, ma = lastima que se quedó poco tiempo! Così la ⁷abuela non ha potuto incontrare il sig. Gandola.

Il giorno di Natale Vi abbiamo pensati tutti uniti, anche con ~~Pej~~ Alejandro e Inés: BUON ANNO! MUCHAS FELICIDADES!

Muchas gracias per la invitacion in Argentina, sarebbe proprio bello conoscere tutta la Vostra cara famiglia, ma per ora non è possibile venire, ma ci rivedremo in Italia. Ora Margherita studia molto per laurearsi in ~~derecho~~ ^{giurisprudenza} nella Università Cattolica di Milano, speriamo che finisca entro il 1989, se todo sigue bien. Marta è arrivata a Chiavenna da San Diego per Natale, ma è già ripartita per tornare a San Diego. Anche con Marta abbiamo parlato molto di Voi e hemos tomado una copa a la salud de Susana, Ernesto y todas la familia dei parenti argentini.

Qui è fríddo, siamo in inverno, però non nevica per grazia di Dio. Noi andiamo sempre tutte le domeniche a Chiavenna per la mia attività di avvocato.

Aspettiamo la primavera per coltivare anche noi i fiori nel nostro giardino e mettere in funzione la vasca nel centro del giardino. Vi penseremo; peccato essere così lontani: potremmo scambiarcì le qualità di fiori.

Con molta probabilità nel verano andremo a fare una crociera con ~~la~~ il barco Eugenio C. (linea Costa, che viene anche in Argentina): noi NON arriveremo in Argentina, ma andremo in Spagna, Marocco, Canarie, Madera, Azorre, Portogallo. Il barco è bello e con molto divertimento; questa è l'unica occasione che teniamo per descansar, perchè tutto l'anno siamo sempre molto occupati. Vi manderemo cartoline della crociera.

Un grande abhaccio, beso cariño a Olympia, Margherita
harte pronto! Graziery

62

molte grazie caro Ernesto per la tua offerta di cottizzazione! Al.

Carissima Marta,

chiedo scusa per il ritardo nel rispondere a Voi ed a Susanna e anche nell'identificare alcune fotografie: abbiamo avuto tanto lavoro per la nostra professione. Sui Chiodera Dalla Chiesa posso assicurarVi che si trattava di una famiglia importante e distinta: discendevano dalla famiglia Mascaranico, i cui membri erano banchieri e discendevano anche da un ramo della famiglia Rusca che era signora di Como nel 1400. Giovan Battista Dalla Chiesa aveva solo la figlia Marta che aveva sposato Filippo Chiodera di Gravedona, sul lago di Como, appartenente a una famiglia importante, figlio di ser Giuseppe. A Chiavenna c'era la famiglia Mattoi, tirolese, di origine di Pfundz, in Austria, al confine con la Svizzera. Paolo Antonio Mattoi, vedovo con una bambina, Caterina, si è risposato con Marta Chiodera, figlia di Filippo e di Marta Dalla Chiesa; Marta Chiodera Mattoi si è tanto affezionata all'figlia del marito e l'ha fatta sposare al proprio fratello Carlo Chiodera: da questi due sposi è nata Marta Chiodera, moglie di Giovanni Perego senior e madre di Giovanni Perego Junior, marito di Olympia Riva, ed è nata anche Caterina, sposata Gandola. Da Marta Mattoi Chiodera sono nati due maschi, Filippo e Giacomo, molto colti e intraprendenti: Filippo era molto ricco, portava degli enorme baffi ed era nonno di Olympia Riva, moglie di Giovanni Perego (Olympia Riva e Giovanni Perego erano parenti tra loro). Giacomo è morto molto prima di Filippo, lasciando la moglie Giulia Torricella De Balbiani, ultima discendente dei conti di Chiavenna, e tre bambine. Fatemi sapere se Vi interessano altre notizie. Un caro saluto, Olympia e Margherita

Dearest Marta, I apologize for the delay in responding to you and Susana and in the identification of some photos: we have had so much work in our profession. Related to the Chiodera Dalla Chiesa, I can assure you that it was an important and distinguished family; they descended from the Mascaranico family, whose members were bankers and also descended from a branch of the Rusca family who were lords of Como in 1400. Giovanni Battista Dalla Chiesa had only one daughter Marta who had married Filippo Chiodera from Gravedona, on Lake Como, belonging to an important family, son of Giuseppe. In Chiavenna there was the Mattoi family, tyrolean, originating in Pfundz, in Austria, on the border with Switzerland. Paolo Antonio Mattoi, a widower with a little girl, Caterina, married to Marta Chiodera, daughter of Filippo and Marta Dalla Chiesa; Marta Chiodera Mattoi became so fond of her husband's daughter that she made her marry her brother Carlo Chiodera: from this marriage was born Marta Chiodera, wife of Giovanni Perego senior and mother of Giovanni Perego Junior, husband of Olympia Riva, and Caterina was also born, who married Gandolla. From Marta Mattoi Chiodera were born two males, Filippo and Giacomo, very educated and enterprising: Filippo was very rich, with a big mustache, and was the grandfather of Olympia Riva, wife of Giovanni Perego (Olympia Riva and Giovanni Perego were relatives to each other). Giacomo died long before Filippo, leaving his wife Giulia Torricella De Balbiani, the last descendant of the counts of Chiavenna, and three children. Let me know if you are interested in other news.

A warm greeting, Olympia and Margherita

Carissima Marta,

non abbiamo più i ritratti dipinti a olio di Filippo Chiodera, Marta Dalla Chiesa, Giovan Battista Chiodera: sono bruciati quando la nostra casa di Chiavenna è stata in parte devastata da un incendio nel 1914. Mia mamma mi diceva che nei ritratti tutti avevano la parrucca bianca, tipica del '700. Giovanni Perego senior e Marta Chiodera, oltre alle tre gemelle, tra cui Caterina, hanno avuto Giovanni Junior, marito di Olympia Riva, Giuseppe, morto in Argentina senza figli, Antonio, marito di Elisabetta Pelfini, che ha avuto un figlio maschio emigrato in America, una figlia femmina sposata a Berlino e un'altra figlia, Erina, che è morta a Chiavenna, non sposata, nel 1939, molto buona e brava; due bambine, figlie di Antonio ed Elisabetta Pelfini sono morte piccole, di una, Marta, abbiamo il ritratto. Giovanni Perego junior aveva anche una sorella, Maria, sposata a un avvocato Della Vita, a loro unica figlia non si è sposata ed è morta da tempo. Altri fratellini e sorelline di Giovanni Junior sono morti piccoli. Antonietta era Antonietta Carugati, figlia di Carlotta Perego, sposata con l'avvocato Varcaponti, è morta senza figli; tutti i figli di Carlotta Perego sono morti senza figli, tranne Giovanni, che ha avuto una sola figlia, che vive a Milano: io l'ho invitata ad unirsi a noi quando Voi siete venute, mai suoi impegni di lavoro glielo hanno impedito (è ragioniera in una grande ditta, ha un figlio di 15 anni). Un'altra Antonietta era la figlia di Teresa Rizzi, che si è incontrata con la vostra avuela, quando è venuta nel 1950; Antonietta, figlia di Teresa, era la mamma di Mariuccia Comotti, di cui Vi ho già scritto, e nonna di Giulia Cassina, che abita a Londra. Sto guardando le fotografie e Vi risponderò a breve. Non so nulla dei Gandola, tranne che erano di Bellagio, della frazione di Pescallo.

Un abbraccio. A presto

Carissima Marta, we no longer have the oil-painted portraits of Filippo Chiodera, Marta Dalla Chiesa, Giovanni Battista Chiodera: they burned when our house in Chiavenna was partly devastated by a fire in 1914. My mother told me that in the portraits everyone had the white wig, typical of the '700. Giovanni Perego senior and Marta Chiodera, in addition to the three twins, including Caterina, had Giovanni Junior, husband of Olympia Riva, Giuseppe, who died in Argentina without children, Antonio, husband of Elisabetta Pelfini, who had a male son who emigrated to America, a daughter married in Berlin and another daughter, Erina, who died in Chiavenna, unmarried, in 1939, very good and able; two girls, daughters of Antonio and Elisabetta Pelfini died small, of one, Marta, we have her portrait. Giovanni Perego junior also had a sister, Maria, married to a lawyer Della Vita, their only daughter, I do not know if she married and died a long time ago. Other little brothers and sisters of Giovanni junior died young. Antonietta was Antonietta Carugati, daughter of Carlotta Perego, married to the lawyer Varcaponti, died without children; all of Carlotta Perego's children died without children, except Giovanni, who had only one daughter, who lives in Milan. I had invited her to join us when you came, but her work commitments prevented her (she is an accountant in a large company, she has a 15-year-old son). The other one, Antoinetta was the daughter of Teresa Rizzi, who met with your grandmother Maria when she arrived in 1950; Antonietta, Teresa's daughter, was the mother of Mariuccia Comotti, of whom I have already written to you, and grandmother of Giulia Cassina, who now lives in London. I am looking at the photos and I will answer you shortly. I do not know anything about the Gandollas, except that they were from Bellagio, from the hamlet of Pescallo. A hug. Later. Olympia with Margherita

FAMILY REUNIONS EXPLORED OUR ROOTS WITH CAROSO AS THE LEADER

DEDICATION

I dedicate this book to my cousin, Susana González-Albarracín, better known as Tatana, who passed away on February 8, 2022, in Córdoba, Argentina, of COVID-19 complications. She was a major force in our genealogy quest. She spent many hours on the phone and on the internet, looking for missing relatives, encouraging people to attend our family reunions, and in general, connecting members of the family together. Her “Pandora Suitcase,” full of old family photos, opened a whole world of new relatives we did not know existed. She was quick to smile and found the funny side of everything. She will be greatly missed!

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I would like to express my most heartfelt thanks to Catherine “Cat” Shehan Ayala, who spent many hours editing this document. Her expertise, patience, and sense of order made this a much better book! Cat, I could not have done it without you. Thank you for taking this project seriously.
